Peerialism AB develops large scale solutions for efficient transport and storage of data over the Internet. The team behind Peerialism includes some of world's leading researchers and engineers in the area of p2p overlay networks. The team has close ties with Sweden's premier software R&D institute, the Swedish Institute of Computer Science, and with the Royal Institute of Technology in Stockholm.

In combination with experienced entrepreneurs and business managers, the Peerialism team has in a short time advanced the state-of-the-art in several key technology areas, brought to market a leading solution for live video streaming, served as a respected technology partner in large EU projects and published several highly acclaimed research papers.

During 2010 Peerialism will bring to the market a new cloud storage service - the Interdisk - that will fundamentally change how we manage and distribute digital information. The company was founded in 2007 and is based in Stockholm, Sweden.
